The Late Secretary Marcy. It appears that upon his retirement from the office of Secretary of State, Mr. Marcy was tendered the Arter I got dun, I tuck about four fingers ove red presidency of a new international bank by several head an' crawled up into the cabin loft to take a merchants in New York. This honor he declined in a letter dated April 12th. Mr. Marcy, at the time, seemed to have a presentiment of his early death, as appears by the following extract: "The suggestion presents an opening, which at an earlier period in life and under other circumstances. would have been very acceptable, but I am quite too old to adventure upon a new pursuit, so different from those which have hitherto engaged my attention, unless forced into it by inducements stronger than any that now press upon me. My means for the comforts of life, it is true, would be considered rather scanty for a younger man surrounded by even an ordinary number of dependants, but much less is wanted when the journey is near its end. I have no disturbing anxieties on that account. Every considerate man should desire to place an interval between the active affairs of his life and its close. In my case that space cannot be long. "The foregoing view does not embrace another which has an equally controlling influence with me. I have been led into many different pursuits, though none so distinct from the others as the one now proposed, and I may, perhaps, be allowed to say. without the imputation of vanity, that I have succeeded tolerably well in each; but it would be hazardous to go much further in such experiments at my time of life. The pitcher which goes very often to the well will be very likely at last to come back broken."

In this connection we copy the following from the Froy Whig of Monday: "It is generally known that the daughter of Governor Marcy passed the 4th of July in the family of an acquaintance in this city. She formed one of a circle of friends, including ladies and gentlemen, at the house during the day. While all the others were in cheerful spirits, it was observed in the forenoon that Mrs. M. appeared to be depressed in mind. So obvious was this to her companions, that it was the subject of some remark, when she said she was unaccountably impressed with the fear that a signal calamity had overtaken some member of her family. Early in the afternoon the news of the death of Gov. Marcy reached this city, and it was known to gentlemen composing the party in which Miss M. was some time before it was communicated to her. While the gentlemen were in a room by themselves, discussing the manner of conveying to the daughter the sad intelligence, and before she could by any means have received the least intimation of the event, she suddenly threw her handkerchief over her face, and evidently in deep grief, retired alone up stairs."

"Lord Ellenborough was once about to go on the circuit, when Lady Ellenborough said that she should like to accomdid not encumber the carriage with band-boxes, which were his utter abhorrence. During the first day's journey, Lord El-'Yes.' lenborough happening to stretch his legs, struck his foot against something below the seat. He discovered that it was bandbox had tumbled out of the window by some extraordinary chance, were going to pick it up, when Lord Ellenborough furiously called out, 'Drive on!' The bandbox was accordingly left by the ditch-side. Having reached the county town where he was to officiate as judge, Lord Ellenborough proceeded to array himself for his appearance in the court house. 'Now,' said he, 'where's my wig - where is my wig?' 'My Lord,' replied his attendant, 'it was thrown out of the carriage window."

" Many years ago, in the city of Providence, there was a large audience collected within the walls of the old theatre (now Grace church.) The performance pointed at its victim, the house was wrought up to On his return he was met by Mrs. Robinson, who the intensest excitement, and all was still as death.
